Thanks for being part of our family of subscribers!

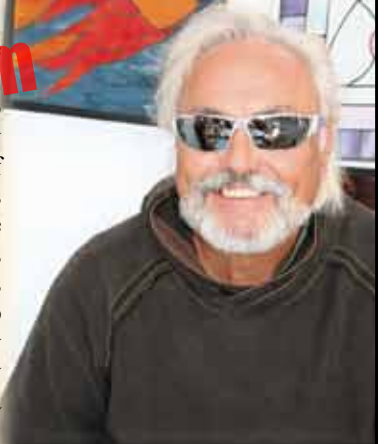

When we started the concept of publishing a guide to the art & craft shows over eighteen years ago, we envisioned a book that would be the result of a vast networking of exhibitors. It wasn't to be any one person's idea of what a guide should be. After all, who knows your work and it's market better than you... the person who is "in the trenches" every week... talking to customers... listening to stories... dealing with inclement weather... tolerating unreasonable show sponsors and a whole slew of other things that it takes to succeed in this business.

Over the years we've heard many of your suggestions and if you've been a subscriber for more than just a couple of years you've seen us implement many of your ideas. We've seen this publication transform from something that resembles our flyer... into one of the more influential guides on America's eastern coast. We've grown from a circulation that included a few friends... to one that numbers in the thousands... and we're read by even more! God willing and with your support, we hope this growth continues... but most of all, we hope to continue to be one of the most useful tools you have in your quest to have your own business grow with the same good fortune we've had. Here's some information you ought to know.

HOW & WHY WE PUBLISH EVERY THREE MONTHS...

We publish four times per year... Winter, Spring, Summer & Fall. Each time we publish, we list events for up to one year in advance. The reason we do that is because in order to get into many of the larger events, you have to send your application in several months before the show to be considered. For most events though the planning is only done a few months before the event and of course we can't publish information if the event sponsor hasn't even set a date. That's why every three months or so we delete everything that's already happened and then put in all the updated information that has just become available. That's good news because most exhibitors don't have the funds to book so many events so far in advance and even if you did, the chances of being accepted to every event you apply for are minimal. Everyone's schedule usually consists of a few shows booked months in advance and then some they book only a couple weeks beforehand. Every three months you'll get a fresh batch of shows and a new opportunity to book events!

HOW THE BOOK IS ORGANIZED

The book is divided into five sections. The “Art & Crafts Showcase” is the first section. Here you’ll read articles about improving your business, show reviews, advertising to help you learn more about specific events and business opportunities, show reviews, a listing of professional promoters and much more!

The second section is called “Shows At A Glance.” Here you’ll have the ability to see a quick overview of the shows taking place each week. They are organized first by date, then by number of days and then by city and show sponsor. You’ll be able to see enough information about each show to find it in the main listing section of the guide which we’ll talk about in a few moments.

The third section is the “Location Cross Reference.” In this index we break down the state into seven regions, alphabetize the cities and then tell you what’s happening in each city throughout the year in date order. This is handy when you’d like to find shows to participate in that are close by or if you hear about a great event in a specific city and want to find out the details.

The fourth section is named “The Shows.” This is the main listing section of the guide where you’ll find complete details about each event. If you’ve been a subscriber for very long, you’ll see that we’ve incorporated a new organization in this section. As we’ve expanded the coverage of our guide, finding shows exactly where you want them has become a bit more difficult. So, for those of you who only want to participate in certain regions you’ll now find all the shows separated by state... and then by dates within each state. We hope this will help you spend time looking exactly where you want to look! We now include information for shows in all the EASTERN United States, you’ll find shows in each state listed in their own separate section. The idea behind the information we present here is to give you enough information about each event to see if it meets your criteria for an event you’d like to participate in. Since the very nature of our work is so unique, what works best for one exhibitor may be a terrible situation for another. After all, if the same thing worked for everyone, there would only be a handful of shows each week and everyone would be creating the same thing. Luckily for all of us that isn’t the case. No one could possibly participate in 4000 shows throughout the year, but by having a great number of choices at your fingertips, you stand a lot better chance of making a good match between your work shows! We've all done it. And usually the one we've missed is an event we've been dying to try. Once again "Where The Shows Are!!!" comes to the rescue. Not every show has a deadline date, in fact many just keep taking applications until they are full. Quite a few however require that your application be received by a specified time. Here you'll find all the shows with deadlines listed first by the actual deadline date, then the date of the show and then you'll see enough brief information so that you can locate the show in the main listing section of the guide. Check this section weekly and you'll avoid the disappointment of missing the deadline date!

WHO'S RESPONSIBLE FOR WHAT?

There are over 1200 shows listed in this issue of "WHERE THE SHOWS ARE!!!" and certainly not all of them will be right for you. Make sure you personally call the sponsor of each show you are interested in to get the most up-to-date information on that particular event.

Our listings come from a wide variety of sources and we do everything possible to be as accurate as possible. However because we are human, we make mistakes once in a while and we can not assume responsibility for any inconveniences this may cause. However if you let us know of any discrepancies, we will correct the error in our next issue. No matter how hard we try, there are some shows that we miss, and don't include in our guide. So if you see missing shows, please let us know and we'll verify all the details and include it in our next issue. Your help, will help a great many others!!! We'd also like to ask you to be fair with yourself and with us... The internet has allowed us to provide even more up-to-date service for you than we ever originally dreamed would be possible when we began compiling information. To make sure you always have access to the newest information we maintain a subscriber only site. To access the complete information you'll need a user name and a password which you can obtain by going to our home page at www.artandcrafts.com, scrolling down the left hand side of the screen to the place where it says "GET PASSWORDS HERE" and then filling out the form creating your new user name and password. Each day we check to see who has signed up... we'll make sure you're a paid subscriber and then we'll approve you. You will then receive an email indicating you're approved. You have the opportunity to go online and check this out anytime your subscription is active. Here again we ask that you keep your password to yourself. Obviously if everyone just accessed the information without paying to get it we couldn't continue to provide the service and at that point we'd all loose out. Our system is pre-programmed to disable any accounts that show abuse or multiple logons. If you've experienced trouble with the site, just give us a call or send us an email message and we'll investigate the logs to determine the cause of the problem and then re-set your account for you. You'll also receive emails from us occasionally when there is important new information we feel would be valuable to you. Normally when we send a message you'll see "Where The Shows Are!!!" in the subject line. If you have spam filters it would be a good idea to set them properly so that you'll get the full value for your subscription dollars! If you do change your current email address please let us know right away so we can adjust our records.

We also provide a social networking website. This service is a cooperative effort between our staff and readers. We provide feedback on current shows and other concerns and we ask you to submit your experiences as well. You'll also find this is a great chance for you to get rid of things you no longer need for your work or to maybe find just what you're looking for in the way of a used canopy or tool you've been looking for. I've been told that maybe a guide to art & craft shows is not the place to discuss the economy. We may better spend our time discussing display setups or what gossip was happening at the last show. The only problem with that thinking is that while we're sitting there with sales down 50 or 60 percent, we're ignoring the reason why. Sure we can say the show promoter didn't advertise well... and that's possible. We can point to show fees and say they are so high it's just impossible to make money... and in some cases that's happened too. Our display may be a bit amiss... our sales techniques come up somewhat short. While some of these may be valid reason for slow sales... reasons we have to constantly be aware of... they may also be excuses. Determining the difference requires an objective evaluation of what we do and under what circumstances we are selling. In reality our performance in sales is a result of a combination of factors. I've written plenty of articles dealing with how we can control things like our display, sales technique or even a mediocre product. The economy and it's effect is much more complicated and although my background is primarily that of an artist, not an economist... I believe many of the "complications" presented to us from those who would make a science out of the economy unduly create those complications so they have a job and sound knowledgeable. It seems relatively simple and what you're about to read is my take on things. Maybe I'm crazy... maybe I'm not, you be the judge...

Just the other day I was in the grocery store looking around for whatever dinner would be that night. After being shocked at the price of beef I knew that was out of the question so I wandered over to the seafood section with high hopes of finding what I needed. After some consideration I decided that at $5.99 per pound (normally $8.99 per pound) the shrimp was the bargain I was looking for! I noticed that right beside the shrimp I was buying was another pile of the same size for $8.99 per pound (normally $11.99 per pound). Now my "knee jerk" reaction was to always buy the less expensive shrimp because the quantity of food was the same. But I asked a bit more about the pricier shrimp to see what the difference was. Of course the species was a bit different... but it turns out that the real difference was that the more expensive shrimp were caught locally and the less expensive shrimp were from Thailand. After a bit of consideration, I decided that although the local shrimp cost a bit more, they were really a better deal for me. Why was that? Simple... the chances are no one who lives in Thailand will probably ever buy my show guide. On the other hand, someone from Port Canaveral Florida may very well purchase the guide. I'd rather put the money into the hand of someone who may put money back in mine!

I got to thinking... maybe this is one of the problems with our economy. We aren't thinking about the overall good of our society, we're thinking about just that moment. What appears to be such a great deal on the surface is not really the bargain we originally thought it to be. That same thinking process has come back to haunt us before in other areas. Remember when dumping garbage in the Atlantic Ocean off the coast of New Jersey seemed to be the most cost effective way to get rid of residential and commercial waste? Of course when hypodermic needles and other miscellaneous trash started washing up on the beach it didn't seem to be such a good idea. Draining the Everglades in Florida seemed to be "gigantic steps toward progress" in the early part of the last century. I watched a 1940's documentary on it not long ago. They told of how turning "wasteland" into usable land was the best idea anyone ever had! Today we know that the idea didn't take into consideration any of the problems that drainage would generate. At the turn of the last century the steel mills of Pittsburgh, PA dumped millions of gallons of polluted water into the nearby rivers and their smokestacks belched so much soot and carbon into the air that it coated just about everything in the city with a black, greasy film of filth. That's part of the reason they are completely silent today.

It appears to me that "economic pollution" of this century is much like the ecological pollution of the last. Just as our resources are finite and you can't just dump garbage and pollutants without having some long term effect... you can't constantly take money from an economy without putting some back in. Any farmer knows that formula well. How long can you continue to expect a great harvest from a field you don't re-nourish with fertilizer? Sure you'll have a couple of great harvests with a fantastic profit... but it won't last long and before you know it the land won't even grow a meager crop. Short term thinking has destroyed our ecology the way that it is now destroying our economy.

We must switch our thinking to a more long term mode. What worked in the late 70's, the 80's and the 90's can't continue because the consumers who made billionaires of people like Waltons of Wal-Mart is unsustainable. From our automobile manufacturers... to our textile industry... our steel making companies... to electronics and more... everything is being moved to those products are brought back here to sell overseas manufacturing where some third in the US, markups are in the thousands of world country can do it cheaper. When percent not the hundreds. Money had never been easier to make! The only problem is... who are we going to sell all these goods to? This whole strategy is based on the idea that everyone here in the USA has a great paying job and with lower costs of the products we consume... our buying power is substantially increased. Unfortunately all those “great paying jobs” for the average citizen are fast disappearing. How many workers have taken pay cuts so they can remain at a job threatening to leave the country? How many other jobs have just simply disappeared only to surface in China or Thailand... or even Vietnam? A generation ago we were obsessed with the threat of Communism and these people were our “mortal enemies.” Today they are our “best buddies” all because of economics. The people are no different... business has forced the transformation. The real threat to the USA is not an ideology... but the economy... and the proof is manifesting itself in what most of us are experiencing right now.

Recessions or depressions have always been subjective sort of things. If you still have a job... it's still paying well... you still have benefits and live is continuing as normal... then although you read the headlines in the newspapers, it's all theoretical. You're still paying your bills, putting food on the table and driving a new car. In fact, things are actually GREAT because there have never been more bargains out there. Wonderful opportunities exist for real estate, luxury items like boats and airplanes and even places like restaurants and hotels have held the line on price increases in order to try to capture business from those whose pay have diminished. On the other hand if you're one of the thousands of people who have lost a job to a factory in China... or have taken a substantial pay cut because the other people who have lost their jobs are not buying (like many of us who depend on the art & craft shows) then this depression is not a theory... it's what we live with every day. The unfortunate part of this equation is that in many cases those people who could actually make a change... the politicians, business leaders in banks and industry... are not motivated to do anything because they are the one reaping the benefits of the stalled economy!

What does all this mean to us... as individuals or owners of small business? Well in general we're probably the ones most likely to be experiencing the reality of depression rather than the theory of it. And as usual... we're the ones who have to initiate the changes because we are the ones most motivated to create change since the “big guys” don't have any particular reason to do it other than their “theoretical concern” for a “theoretical situation.” Every time a job is shipped overseas or wages are cut or people are terminated these “leaders” demonstrate their real concern. And, all the power these “leaders” have is not taken from us... we give it to them. We give it every time we buy supplies marked “made in China”... every time we buy a piece of equipment made in Taiwan and yes... the shrimp that comes from Thailand. The best way to fight back and attempt to restore our economy so we can all make a living is to “consider the bigger picture” and think of the long term effects of our actions rather than the immediate one. Buy your Christmas presents this year from someone at a show who actually makes their own work. Purchase your food from someone who actually grows it themselves. Make it a point to look at labels in the stores and purchase those things made in America... when labels aren’t available then ask. Avoid stores like Wal-Mart, Home Depot & Lowes whenever possible. Don’t use the self-checkout lanes at stores who would replace workers and customer service with a machine. Remember that your purchase can be an investment in your own future... not just an expense today. When you buy from someone who will not put money back in your pocket... THAT is an expense! When you purchase goods or services from someone who will or could eventually buy from you... THAT is an investment in your own future. If all of us do more investing and we systematically avoid “expenses” the short term may cost a little more... but the alternative is far more costly in the end.

It seems to me that every year I wind up going to a lot of the same shows. Whether the show is great... or just another dud... it seems as though I go back more out of habit than anything else. The show is familiar, the parking is easy, I know places I can eat along the way, I know the sponsors... I go there for many of the same reasons you do. This season I've certainly hit a few of the "old favorites," but I've also made it a point to get out to some new events and let you know what's happening at some shows you may not have thought to do.

As you might expect, some were a very pleasant surprise and of course others might be best avoided. For those of you who have been doing the circuit for some time there may be a few of these events you'll want to consider... for exhibitors who are just starting out or course everything is new so you may want to make a little note by the shows as to what we said here in our review.

I'd also like to take a moment to extend to all of you an invitation to contribute to this section of the show guide. These don't always have to necessarily be my opinions or my "Bits & Pieces"... they can be yours too! If you decide to write, just send your article to dan@wheretheshowsare.net.

Summer in Florida does not scream "Attr & Crafts Show!" There are some going on... but not a lot. The major exception to that of course are the various fairground shows and of course the indoor mall shows which are dominated by Huff's Promotions. Our history with Huff's goes back a long way to the early 90's when they were one of the first advertisers in our guide. It's hard to believe, but we've been listing their shows and running the ads for a most 20-years now! For those of you who don't know or maybe haven't talked to anyone at Huff's lately, there has been a big management change at the company. Wendy Bourne who was with the company almost since the beginning has retired from active participation and Kelly Locker, another long time veteran has stepped up to the helm and has now been

"breath of fresh air" that has resulted in a more aggressive and progressive attitude toward both getting exhibitors in the show and customers through the door!

number of customers and the quality of work being exhibited. I got to visit with quite a few people I normally see in the regular outdoor shows during the normal season and then I also got to talk to several people I hadn't encountered before at the regular shows.

Overall the exhibitors seemed to have a very positive report to make regarding the way they were treated by Huff's Promotions and the sales they were making. A mall show is a real "double edged sword." There are plenty of customers compared to what you might find in an outdoor craft show, but then again there is plenty of competition from retailers working with gigantic marketing budgets. As you might imagine that creates some very one sided competition. Luckily the people at Huff's Promotions are well aware of this potential conflict so the process by which they select the work you exhibit is critical...

and they seem to do a great job at carrying it out! Both the careful selection of just the right exhibitors along with good promotion and quality work combine to provide some pretty decent sales on an early August long weekend.

By the way... one more thing Huff's have done recently in some of their mall shows is to let you do just the weekend if you prefer. Not everyone who would like to participate has the capability to stay all four days. Then again if you can do all four it's not a bad bargain. The four day show costs $250.00 while doing two days will cost you $200.00 for the entry fee.

Don't let the summer heat keep you away from a show if you need the business and can't travel. This one is well worth giving some strong consideration!

Here's another show sponsor we've known for a long time. And again someone who has been listing and advertising with us since the very beginning of our publication. Over the years we've been to so many Buckler shows that I couldn't even begin to count them. We've seen some shows so good you wouldn't want to even mention them to your best friends! And of course it's inevitable some were barely adequate. Through it all... winter, spring, summer & fall... just about every month of the year... every year... you'll find Margaret Buckler and her staff working diligently on whatever the next show is on the schedule. In fact, whether the show is great or just good... whether she's signed up 50 exhibitors or 600... I think you'd be hard pressed to find anyone who personally works harder or more consistently than does Margaret. She always has billboards, newspaper advertising, coupons for discount admission to her shows, a big email list and just about every other trick there is to have up her sleeve in order to attract both exhibitors and customers.

The shows we visited this summer Lakeland, Melbourne and Tampa are all representative of the quality and the work the Bucklers bring to the table when they put on a show. Anyone who's been through the circuit more than once knows how hard it is to bring out the customers in the summer. But with a bunch of effort Margaret does just that and usually has a respectable show. And at a time when others have raised their fee to new heights, Buckler Promotions has held the line and hasn't had a substantial increase in years. Just to check out that theory I went back into our old records to see what was being charged. You have to go clear back to around the year 2000 to see and significant difference in the cost of an entry fee. Now that's representative of someone who has carefully watched the market and has worked with exhibitors to continue to produce shows in an affordable way.

Of course you can't compare these just north of Okeechobee and other than Rt. 27 & Rt. 70 the biggest problem it has is that short of arriving by private airplane there just isn't any good way to get to the place that doesn't involve a lot of hours behind the wheel. I've made the drive several times in the past and it always seems that somehow I get behind farm equipment or maybe a slow truck hauling oranges... you name it... chances are I've followed it to Lake Placid. The nice thing though, is once you arrive you'll be impressed buy what a nice little town this really is. It's definitely rural Florida... but I mean that in a very good way.

A large portion of the local residents are involved in either the traditional business of orange groves or more recently the growing of caladiums. In fact, ninety-nine percent of summer events to fall shows... that would be an unfair comparison. But I've been up the coast and back again in the summer... and these shows are worth considering. AND... since they all take place inside with air-conditioning and protection from the rain, the only thing I've seen stop Buckler's shows from happening are the hurricanes we occasionally experience. These are definitely craft shows. I've seen some fine art from time to time... but crafts are what sells at the Buckler shows so make sure that's what you have to offer. When you're putting together your schedule this upcoming year make sure to take a look at all they have to offer. OH... and for those of you who don't know... Buckler Promotions is now handling THE HARVEST in Miami. This event continues to draw great crowds every year and offers an outstanding opportunity so sell in South Florida.

Lake Placid, Florida is a long drive from just about anywhere in the south. It's located the world's caladiums are grown here, making this small rural community the Caladium Capital of the World! This festival celebrates that achievement. Well now that you know the history of caladiums and how hard it can be to get to Lake Placid... lets talk a bit about the show.

The first thing you need to know about this event is that it seems regardless of how well the show goes each year, it usually sells out by the deadline date. In fact, if you'd like to participate it's smart to get your application in as soon as possible because I know that in the past they've had so many applications that the event was actually closed out before the deadline date! I don't know how fair that is... but I know it did happen.

The rather "off the beaten trail" location make the town difficult to reach... but at the same time it also means that it's difficult for the locals to get to other places too so as you might imagine, the turn out is usually very good for the show. This last summer was no exception... crowds were good while we were there and several exhibitors told us they had been good for the last couple of days. Many of those same people had done the show for several years and they also told us that sales we substantially off this year as compared to previous events. The bottom line is that the show is usually well worth doing... in fact you'd probably usually call it excellent for a summer show in Florida. This year several people told us it was only marginally worth the drive.

In all fairness, we are in a depression... and I've heard the same story over and over again at many of the events we've attended. The problem really is that you just can't fairly

Cocoa, FL 32923-0001

Show Fee: $137.00

We've been to the Cocoa Village shows many times over the years. During that time we've both participated as exhibitors and visited as publishers of our guide. And we've seen the full gamut of results with the show. Over all those years there have been a surprisingly few "changes of the guard" for the event. Initially we dealt with JoAnne Gunn... known for her strong handed approach to show management. Then the baton was passed to Jack Wharton who stumbled a bit in the beginning but turned out to be an excellent show manager. Next we answered to Lorena Palmero and during her "reign" we saw some decline in both quality of exhibitor as well as attendance at the show. In all fairness though, she did take control right at the beginning of a serious recession... it may compare your sales three or four years ago during some of the best years we've ever seen, with those you'll experience when some people are more concerned with paying their mortgages than they are about buying your work at a show.

In any case... this year excepted... the Caladium Festival is a summer event well worth considering. Get your application in early...and lets hope by next year we're well on our way to getting out of the current economic problems!

have been difficult to keep up the pace under those circumstances. This now brings us to the new "master of ceremonies" Catherine Sligh. You'll notice as soon as you hear her accent that she's not a native of Florida... or for that matter of the USA. She comes to us via Ireland and the story of how she wound up in Florida is interesting.

Catherine took over just a few weeks before the Fall Show and had her hands full right from the beginning. Lorena had taken all the show records with her when she unexpectedly left the position so Catherine was faced with not only running a show within a couple of weeks but also reconstructing the missing records as well. To make matters worse there was a malfunction of the office phone system that took a few days to straighten out and then her husband and oldest son came down with the swine flu! Can you think of many more challenges to meet at a new job? We heard a few complaints from exhibitors... but in all honesty if you know all the circumstances then I'm sure it's easy to understand a bit of confusion.

Even without taking into consideration all the initial problems... the show actually came off pretty well. There were plenty of exhibitors... lots of customer and aside from a couple of misunderstandings about booth assignment I'd say this was a job well done. I've talked to Catherine since and she has quite a few good ideas designed to both enhance the attendance by shoppers and to pretty much describes this north Florida event. Located "around the sink hole" in High Springs the show feature a nice selection of crafts, a pleasant shopping experience for people attending, convenient parking, good signage to attract customers and a very visible location... a nice balance of all things that make for a decent show.

I don't think anyone got rich selling their crafts at this show... but there were quite a few bags leaving the event too. Not every craft show has to be a gigantic production to be considered successful. In fact, even in a very large show with thousands of customers and hundreds of exhibitors you'll find that the actually number of sales you make is proportionately quite small. A successful show can be more about balance... the number of exhibitors compared to the number of shoppers... and High Springs offers just that

This is a nice little craft show. That in this low key event.

I wouldn't drive 200 miles to be in this show... maybe someday that will be the case... but not yet. If however I were anywhere in the area I'd definitely consider participating. In fact, this would be a fantastic starter show for a craftsman who had limited inventory and needed exposure and a few sales.

I really enjoyed visiting the show... it brought back memories for me about how I got started in some of the nice, smaller shows. I met some of the friendliest exhibitors here in High Springs and under the right circumstances I'd definitely recommend considering this show for next year.

Pioneer Days things haven't changed all that much. In addition to some great crafts, there is a full entertainment schedule, local civic groups with all kinds of food, a nice exhibit of pioneer life and an enjoyable atmosphere that is infective to both exhibitors and shoppers alike.

I saw quite a few familiar faces as I walked through the show and spoke with exhibitors... and this was balanced by a fair number of new exhibitors too just "stretching their limbs" a bit and starting to learn the business. Probably the most unusual aspect of this show is that it's a Friday & Saturday show, not the usual Saturday & Sunday arrangement. So when you see it in our listings and you think we made a mistake... we didn't.

As I said earlier... this is a craft show, hands down. And at that, it is primarily a country craft show as you might expect at a pioneer type of festival. The people who attend are mainly from the surrounding little towns and there are no major metropolitan areas nearby. Attendance is very good though and the people who come do spend a fair amount of time and part with a fair amount of money buying from a nice selection of exhibitors. I would say for the $50.00 entry fee this is a very good investment in an early season show. Sales were decent according to most people I spoke with and most indicated they would return next year.

I've been to a few TNT shows over the last few years and for the most part they are OK shows. You spend your money and you can expect enough sales to justify coming back again. Terri and her husband are always pleasant, the show goes on as planned, customers show up and sales are made. Judging by the fact that she has quite a few exhibitors returning each year it's obvious they must be meeting with a reasonable degree of success.

You can imagine my delight when I decided to go to the Tarpons Springs Labor Day show and when I got there it was actually difficult to get a good parking place! By contrast... whenever I go to a show and parking is absolutely no problem at all... I've got to be prepared to hear a lot of complaints.

Of all the shows that have taken place there over the last bunch of years I had actually never been to the Sponge Docks in Tarpon Spring before. I can see right from the start why this is a desirable location. You have a natural flow of tourists looking to take in the local ambiance and when you combine that with the shoppers drawn by the show on relatively narrow walkways the impression of a really nice crowd is definitely enhanced. This impression then leads to even more people and it also slows the customers down and that leads to more buying. Ironically I was very minimal here and it was clear Terri was selective about those she accepted for the show.

Overall I'd recommend this show. There were a fair amount of sales, a good crowd, a nice location and a fair entry fee relative to the quality of the show.

don't think I spoke to one exhibitor who was complaining about sales... what a nice treat! And of course as nice as that was for me... it was even nicer for the exhibitors parting with merchandise and putting cash in their pockets!

Labor Day next year... and you really should give it some thought... you'll want to know what was selling. Although there were a few people selling some fine art... primarily what you'll see walking out the door in bags are quality crafts. Although there was some buy/sell as you'll see in most any show... it

There just aren't too many shows out there that are free... but this is one of them! Well it isn't exactly "Free..." but there is no set fee, it's simply a donation to this worthwhile cause and that is based upon your generosity. I don't know what many of you know about Hospice, but this is an extremely worthwhile organization that provides care for those people who are terminally ill and are doing their best to be comfortable in their final days. This location like others I've seen is peaceful and serene as you might expect. The staff is respectful and understanding. The lifestyle those in need are given is as good as you might expect under the circumstances. I don't know many people who are happy about their eventual demise... but once they accept the inevitable, what's left of life can be spent with a fullness not usually available.

It's clear I personally am thankful such a place exists. But regardless of cost... which under any circumstances is reasonable in this case... we still have to make money to continue to be in this business! One nice thing here is that even though the advertising seems to be minimal, there were a fair amount of people wandering around making purchases. I'm sure the event was well publicized to the families and friends of current residents as well as to those families that have been served in the past. The type of work and the level of work varied widely from some very good photographers I've seen at quite a few events to a couple of women doing "handicrafts" from kits they purchased at Michaels craft store. No one appeared to be making major purchases but I'd say most exhibitors left the show with between $100.00 and $300.00 in sales. Nothing to set the world on fire... but if you live nearby, don't have a show already anyway and want to do something with next to no risk then this may be the event for you. Ironically I've been to shows that charged $100.00 or more for an entry fee and had less customers and less sales.

I wouldn't recommend traveling from very far or taking expensive pieces to this show... but it could work out to be worthwhile under the right circumstances.

The Deland Rivertown Festival is a nice season opener for what is normally mostly crafts. I've attended this show more times than I can count and everytime I go... I look forward to coming back again next year. Although sales did seem a bit off this year compared to others... this festival is always well worth considering. The committee is very careful in selecting a group of quality exhibitors and the work is a nice mix so everyone has a good chance to sell. Of course like any other early season show the weather can play a critical role in the show's outcome.

Although as I said sales seemed to be a bit down this year (as in most shows this year... welcome to a slow economy) they were still steady and in fact a few exhibitors told us they had a really great show! One of the problems of being a publisher of a show guide is that the people who are having a very slow show are the ones who have plenty of time to talk to you and the exhibitors who are actually doing quite well have no time at all... so of course the impression one gets can be somewhat off as to the real results of the show. As an exhibitor chatting with other participants about events they've attended you have to be aware of the same issues. Everyone wants to tell you about the show that was a real nightmare, but they won't hardly speak a word about the event where they really cleaned up! Of course the reality is that they don't want the competition.

While we were at the show we didn't see nine out of ten people carrying work back to their cars, but it did seem as though there was a relatively steady stream of buying customers. And it was hard to lay a hand on exactly which category of work was on the way back to the area homes.

With Stetson University located just down the street from the location of the show, you always have a well educated, culturally oriented group of shoppers and that opens the door to not only quality crafts... but to art as well. In fact, later in the fall the Deland Fall

Art Show always draws a nice crowd and decent sales.

Next year when you're getting ready to dust off that canopy and break out the display for another year... you owe it to yourself to give this show a call and see if you might fit in. The fee is reasonable, the setup is easy, the sponsors always do a great job of advertising and since the location of the event is right in the middle of town you can't be missed by just about anyone passing through. Some years are always better than others... but as far as I can see... and obviously by what so many returning exhibitors we see each year can tell you... this is an event you'll want to give some serious consideration to including as a starter next year.

Those of us who have been on this earth for any length of time have had someone at some time copy us. Mostly it's something like a hair style... an article of clothing we've selected... maybe they've even picked up on a saying we use in conversation or a mannerism we've exhibited when around friends. For the most part we'll just smile, or chuckle to ourselves. But when someone copies the work we present at a show, that's an entirely different story!

Although there are really very few new ideas under the sun, a direct copy is at the very least an unethical act. Now there's nothing wrong with looking around at other people's work to get some novel ideas of your own or even if you modify someone else's theme substantially, but an out and out rip off is something to be avoided at all cost. If it's ever happened to you, it's hard to believe that old fairy tale... "imitation is the highest form of flattery!"

There are a million ways to get an idea for a product or other piece of work you want to present at a show. Personally I like to walk through several shows and see what kinds of things are selling best. Are fabric items doing well... are large wood items a good seller or are small ones in greater demand. Do I see more customers buying jewelry or is pottery leaving in the bags of more shoppers. This

"market research" will help point you in a general direction and at the very least in the direction of things people are buying. Another idea for coming up with an idea is to go through old magazines and look at the ads and articles. Although I don't think I'd start mass merchandising hand cranks for Model T's, there are lots of things our great grandparents used in everyday life that have been forgotten over time but are still quite a good idea today! For instance, the headbands "flappers" used in the 1920's reappeared a few years ago as "hair twisties." Lots of crafters made a good deal of money off the idea whose time had come eighty years ago. As I go through shows I see wooden ironing boards, wash boards, antique looking dolls, timeless pottery designs and much more. Another idea along this same line is to visit a museum. Many times it's even better than looking in a magazine because you can actually see and examine work that was popular years ago.

When you walk through stores or even when you're walking down the street make sure you're as observant as possible. Some of the best ideas for fine art or crafts have come from items these places just throw away. I know you've seen old advertising turned into an artistic collage... bent spoons that have been turned into rings... old kitchen tools that have been turned into a stunning "still life"... how about the old palates that are now those cute little signs with all kinds of sayings on them... or a sculpture made from cast off metal parts... the list is endless. Junk is recycled into art work and into quality craft more often than you ever thought.

Just as old music makes its way back into today's sounds, old artistic techniques allow us to explore new dimensions into today's fine art work. The use of "violent" composition technique like the work of Jackson Pollack, the impressionist work of Edouard Manet, the surreal scenes Salvadore Dali brought us or the abstract work of Picasso all serve as tools and the basis of our own expressions. Imitation of these techniques is a great way to learn and as you learn, gradually blend the ideas together... throw in a idea or two yourself... all the time creating your own style. This imitation and variation technique is as old as the hills and is a great way to develop your skill and to expand the range of your work. Take the time to read as much as you can about the art or craft you're most interested in. Go to a bookstore, check out the library, read the art and craft magazines at the grocery store... in short, immerse yourself in the vast sea of knowledge that exists. In a short time you'll be just buzzing with ideas and techniques. The question won't be... "what can I do," it will be... "with so many choices, which do I choose!"

Flower & Garden Expo
April 17-18, 2010
St. Augustine, Florida

Practice really does make perfect and the great masters in every field started with the first step... now is the time to take yours. Not only will this practice allow you to perfect your own work, it makes a great starting off point if your work begins to get stale. Getting back to the basics of how you created your style often times will lead down a new path that hadn't seen the first time you came to a "fork in the road." Creativity is always 10% inspiration and 90% perspiration and it's a long way from the "flattery" of the rip-off artist or craftsman. Anyone can be trained to copy... don't allow yourself to be confined by mere training... prove your talent and "create"... the effort is well-worth the reward!
