Get Your Subscription Renewal FREE !!!

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS...

Once you've purchased our book, you can receive a $5.00 credit toward your renewal for every person you recommend to us, who also subscribes for a full year. To qualify, the person subscribing must send us a subscription form with your name on it along with payment. Additionally, the person subscribing must be a new applicant and have never purchased our book in the past. In the event of any discrepancy as to who gets the credit, the decision of our management staff will be binding & final.

In this guide you'll find several subscription referral forms. Feel free to copy them as much as you'd like or ask us for additional copies. Make sure to put your name on the form. Once we receive payment, we'll credit your account with the $5.00. Send us just eight people who subscribe... and your renewal is FREE !!! It's that simple. If you have any questions, just call us and ask. Otherwise, start working toward your subscription renewal right away !!!

COVER: The work on the cover of this issue is the work of Robbie Boyer. Based in Sarasota, Robbie has been a subscriber for over 15 years and we've seen his mixed media work at shows all over the south. Digital photo by Dan Lewis.

Thanks for being part of our family of subscribers!

When we started the concept of publishing a guide to the art & craft shows over eighteen years ago, we envisioned a book that would be the result of a vast networking of exhibitors. It wasn't to be any one person's idea of what a guide should be. After all, who knows your work and it's market better than you... the person who is "in the trenches" every week... talking to customers... listening to stories... dealing with inclement weather... tolerating unreasonable show sponsors and a whole slew of other things that it takes to succeed in this business.

Over the years we've heard many of your suggestions and if you've been a subscriber for more than just a couple of years you've seen us implement many of your ideas. We've seen this publication transform from something that resembles our flyer... into one of the more influential guides on America's eastern coast. We've grown from a circulation that included a few friends... to one that numbers in the thousands... and we're read by even more! God willing and with your support, we hope this growth continues... but most of all, we hope to continue to be one of the most useful tools you have in your quest to have your own business grow with the same good fortune we've had. Here's some information you ought to know.

HOW & WHY WE PUBLISH EVERY THREE MONTHS...

We publish four times per year... Winter, Spring, Summer & Fall. Each time we publish, we list events for up to one year in advance. The reason we do that is because in order to get into many of the larger events, you have to send your application in several months before the show to be considered. For most events though the planning is only done a few months before the event and of course we can't publish information if the event sponsor hasn't even set a date. That's why every three months or so we delete everything that's already happened and then put in all the updated information that has just become available. That's good news because most exhibitors don't have the funds to book so many events so far in advance and even if you did, the chances of being accepted to every event you apply for are minimal. Everyone's schedule usually consists of a few shows booked months in advance and then some they book only a couple weeks beforehand. Every three months you'll get a fresh batch of shows and a new opportunity to book events!

HOW THE BOOK IS ORGANIZED

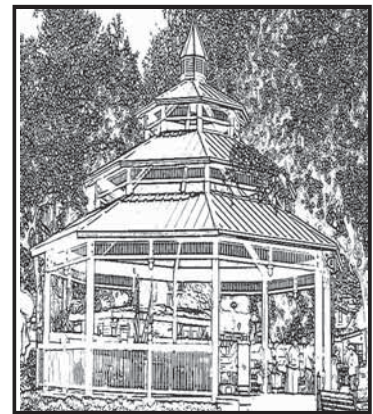

The book is divided into five sections. The "Art & Crafts Showcase" is the first section. Here you'll read articles about improving your business, show reviews, advertising to help you learn more about specific events and business opportunities, show reviews, a listing of professional promoters and much more!

The second section is called "Shows At A Glance." Here you'll have the ability to see a quick overview of the shows taking place each week. They are organized first by date, then by number of days and then by city and show sponsor. You'll be able to see enough information about each show to find it in the main listing section of the guide which we'll talk about in a few moments.

The third section is the "Location Cross Reference." In this index we break down the state into seven regions, alphabetize the cities and then tell you what's happening in each city throughout the year in date order. This is handy when you'd like to find shows to participate in that are close by or if you hear about a great event in a specific city and want to find out the details.

The fourth section is named "The Shows." This is the main listing section of the guide where you'll find complete details about each event. If you've been a subscriber for very long, you'll see that we've incorporated a new organization in this within each state. We hope this will help you spend time looking exactly where you want to look! We now include information for shows in all the EASTERN United States, you'll find shows in each state listed in their own separate section. The idea behind the information we present here is to give you enough information about each event to see if it meets your criteria for an event you'd like to participate in. Since the very nature or our work is so unique, what works best for one exhibitor may be a terrible situation for another. After all, if the same thing worked for everyone, there would only be a handful of shows each week and everyone would be creating the same thing. Luckily for all of us that isn't the case. No one could possibly participate in 4000 shows throughout the year, but by having a great number of choices at your fingertips, you stand a lot better chance of making a good match between your work and the market you'd like to exhibit in. Additionally, no one knows your work and your market better than you do and no one can make a better decision on which shows to participate in than you can. Usually if you do well at a show, you'll do well at other events that have similar characteristics. This information gives you the ability to put your knowledge to work and make informed decisions about the shows you choose.

The final section is "The Deadline Alert." If you've never missed a deadline, you probably haven't booked too many shows! We've all done it. And usually the one we've missed is an event we've been dying to try. Once again "Where The Shows Are!!!" comes to the rescue. Not every show has a deadline date, in fact many just keep taking applications until they are full. Quite a few however require that your application be received by a specified time. Here you'll find all the shows with deadlines listed first by the actual deadline date, then the date of the show and then you'll see enough brief information so that you can locate the show in the main listing section of the guide. Check this section weekly and you'll avoid the disappointment of missing the deadline date!

WHO'S RESPONSIBLE FOR WHAT?

There are almost 1500 shows listed in this issue of "WHERE THE SHOWS ARE!!!" and certainly not all of them will be right for you. Make sure you personally call the sponsor of each show you are interested in to get the most up-to-date information on that particular event.

Our listings come from a wide variety of sources and we do everything possible to be as accurate as possible. However because we are human, we make mistakes once in a while and we can not assume responsibility for any inconveniences this may cause. However if you let us know of any discrepancies, we will correct the error in our next issue. No matter how hard we try, there are some shows that we miss, and don't include in our guide. And it never fails, that as soon as we print an issue, someone calls us with a show we never even thought of. Remember this guide is designed to be of a benefit to all who use it. So if you see missing shows, please let us know and we'll verify all the details and include it in our next issue. Your help, will help a great many others!!! We'd also like to ask you to be fair with yourself and with us... Since the intent of our guide is for individuals to use for the express purpose of investigating arts and craft shows per se, any other use, copying, reproduction in any way or selling

ALL YEAR LONG !

Anyone who's been through even one season in the SOUTHEAST can tell you that summer sales can be slow. Sure there are a handfull of good shows, but the reality is that there just aren't enough to go around. That's why we expanded to the rest of the EASTERN USA. Now you'll be able to take advantage of shows in a much larger area! In the new version of our guide we list over 4000 shows through the year. So in addition to what you normally expect from us, you'll now find events in Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, New England & more! Now there's no excuse for not making a living all twelve months of the year!

When the economy is booming, we have the privilege of focusing the efforts of our work on a small aspect of money making opportunities. Just as it's difficult to teach an old dog new tricks, for those of us who have been at this for a great many years in this business it may be difficult to begin "thinking outside the box" with regard to what we've been doing to make a living. For those who are just starting out (the new dogs I guess), the "voice of experience" may not actually be the best advice at all because the rules have changed!

Of course the "tough" times are really just that if you've had the opportunity to experience the "good" times. If you're just starting out in the business then this is the only experience you've had. And while we've certainly not been left untouched by the current financial crisis... this isn't the only time economic ups and downs have had an effect on the arts. In fact throughout time business rules have been re-written quite a few times and as a result there have been a wide range of changes... maybe they haven't effected us personally... but they've happened and business took new directions, created new products and opened up new doors!

Imagine being a fisherman and then having your nets banned... that certainly took some adjustment. How about being the telegraph company after the telephone came of age. Did you ever consider how the ice companies fared once the modern freezer and refrigerator became common place? Or how about being an expert in Iron Lung design after Joseph Salk invented the vaccine for polio. When was the last time you used an NCR form... or carbon paper? For that matter, how many of you even know what carbon paper is? Time, technology and advances in our culture have always re-written the rules of how we get business done. The current financial crisis will shake things up quite a bit and the chances are good that quite a few "rules" will be re-written.

Usually on the back side of these major upheavals we wonder what the big concern was. Once a solution is found it always becomes obvious. Of course there will be plenty of mistakes made in the quest for that solution... but it will come. When I see all the efforts made to "bail out" the companies who are leaders in yesterday's economy, what I really see is an effort to maintain the "status quo" of today's situation. Unfortunately I believe most of these efforts are either doomed to fail or at the very least will result in significant changes causing the companies that emerge on the other side of this crisis to be much different than those that started out. The whole idea of the "bail out" means keeping those who were in power at the beginning, still in power at the end. Thus maintaining the status quo. But we can't forget that these are the people who got us into this in the first place. It was their bad decisions, their mismanagement, their business philosophy, their plans and their vision! It just didn't work!

Change is inevitable. Whether it is a change in the way we do banking, the way we communicate, the way we catch fish, practice medicine or the way we sell our art or crafts. It's hard to maintain prospective without looking back occasionally to see what our concerns were ten years ago... or maybe even twenty years ago. To do that I like to read old magazines or newspapers. Sometimes I even like to read articles I wrote myself many years ago. They can become the basis for an article I write today... or if it's still appropriate, those older article may actually become today's article. I thought I'd take a look at the Spring 1999 issue of "Where The Shows Are!!!" to see what I was thinking about and what the concerns of the business were at that time. Surprisingly a lot of what I hear on the street today is just about the same thing we were talking about then. Sure the shows had different names and the people were different in many cases... but the concerns were not radically different.

Reading those articles reminded me that there are "tough times" at all times.

The only difference is who it is affecting at the moment. Sure there are challenges present in today's market that weren't there in 1999... but there were concerns back then too. The basics we do today aren't all that different than the basics we did back then. We constantly have to figure out new ways of creating... better ways of marketing... how to expand our customer base... and most of all, how not to stagnate ourselves by imposing our own limitations. We should at all costs avoid becoming prisoners of our past experiences. Although it's important to be aware of the past, we must put it in proper perspective and then move forward. Learn from the past, but don't let it keep you from living in the present and planning for the future. The "tough times" of today will be the "good times" of tomorrow! Set your goals, make your plans, find alternative markets, sell you work in a new way, create interesting packaging or a new way to use what you create. Quit listening to the media tell us how bad things are and instead focus on all the good things we're blessed with and all the opportunities we have in front of us. There's always something fresh lying just beyond the horizon and it's there for us to find!

We've attended quite a few events this winter and early spring. In the last ten weeks we've been to over thirty events! We've seen the small shows and the large ones... the fine art events and the small craft shows. A few "carnival" type events and even some of the markets that have started springing up all over the state. We've talked to thousands of exhibitors and shoppers in the crowds. We've had a chance to experience those events where there were tons of shoppers and very few sales as well as a couple shows where sales were actually quite good although you wouldn't believe it from the sparse crowds that were present.

Just like you, we're doing our best to get a handle on the market... what's selling... who's buying and what direction everything is going. I remember during the late 90's buying into the stock market was virtually a can't lose situation... everything was on it's way up. You could make money in spite of yourself! Then when the stock market became volatile all the smart money went to real estate. You just couldn't lose there for quite some time! The art and craft show business wasn't much different. Shows were popping up all over the place and even the ones that were put together without much thought at all seemed to be producing sales... anyone could make money just about any time.

Well just like the stock market and real estate, the party has to end some time. And today the party isn't really over, and it's not that you can't still make a living at the art and craft shows... but you do have to pay much closer attention to the events and be quite a bit more careful than you may have had to do in the past. The market seems to have thinned out both in the number of events you can choose to participate in as well as the number of exhibitors who are participating. Several of the shows you've always come to expect are weighing their options as to whether they may happen this year and we've seen many exhibitors take on other jobs in addition to the shows they'll participate in this year.

There have been a few casualties particularly in the early season for Fall 2009. The Riverside Avondale Preservation show that always takes place during the second week of September in Jacksonville, FL has decided that last year was indeed the last year. They've started a weekly market under the bridge and have focused their efforts in that location. Another show that was just getting off the ground and seeing some real progress was the Oviedo Butterfly Festival in Oviedo, Florida that takes place in early September. Unfortunately their sponsorships just didn't come through this year and that caused the cancellation of the show. The Zellwood Corn Festival in Zellwood, Florida... a late May event has been cancelled for the 2009 season. The Pinecastle Pioneer Festival in Orlando, FL has also cancelled for this year. The economy has taken its toll and a few events although most shows are planning on continuing. You may see a drop in prize money... maybe a little less entertainment and a few other amenities... but most shows will still be on the agenda.

Another thing we've seen happening throughout the east coast has been quite a few weekly markets popping up in just about every city. Initially there were a few like Sunsets at Pier 60 in Clearwater or the Sunset Celebration in Key West... but now we're seeing them all over the place. As I mentioned earlier... the Riverside Avondale people in

Jacksonville, FL have dropped their annual show in favor of a Saturday market. Ybor City, New Smyrna Beach, St. Petersburg, Lake Worth, New Port Richey, Dunedin and many others have followed suit and offer some sort of weekly market sort of affair. Although these do offer a place to set up and sell, our biggest concern is that in our opinion they also devalue the concept of an art or craft show. Usually it more closely resembles a flea market with vegetables, food and a just about every import known to man for sale. A few of them actually encourage the exhibitors to make "deals" with the customers. This whole arrangement defeats years of trying to separate the farmers markets and flea markets from art shows or craft shows and although if you're hard up for a few dollars this does offer an opportunity... I can't imagine you're going to see much in the way of sales. The other problem with this kind of a "weekly" arrangement is that it takes away the "sense of urgency" for a customer to purchase your work right now. Even if you aren't going to return the following week, the customer is trained to think that someone will be here again next week with similar work and it's easy to put the purchase off. I remember trying a few of these type shows back in the mid 80's before I knew about bonafide art and craft shows and the sales results were disastrous. Maybe today the experience would be different... certainly I hope so! But I remain skeptical. If you've been participating in any of these events please let us know how you're doing!

Lets talk about some of the shows we did attend over the last couple of months...

crafts section there was also a nice car show with what appeared to be a least 100 custom and antique vehicles as well as entertainment all day long and plenty of food of all kinds. I really expected some of the food vendors to complain since there were quite a few of them, but the selection committee did a real nice job of making sure there was very little overlap with regards to the type of food each vendor offered and of course with 40,000 people coming through in one day there are plenty of customers to go around.

Everyone seemed to be selling something... and although what I saw was primarily crafts you'd expect to see in an event like this, there were also some exhibitors selling higher end work too. One jeweler in particular told me that she was actually surprised at how well she was doing because her expectations had not been that high. Just as the selection committee had chosen a wide variety of food for the show... they used their heads in the selection of crafts and art as well. I saw a lot of work (you can imagine with 400 exhibitors) but I didn't see too much of any one thing. Placement of the booths was done well also. You didn't see jewelers beside other jewelers or wood workers backed right up to another wood worker. And you didn't see any two exhibitors that were just about exactly alike. Although you'd expect some buy/sell at an event like this... after all it is intended to be a festival... at no time did you get the impression that the Kumquat Festival was just another Flea Market taking place on the downtown city streets. Whoever does the selection and placement for this show deserves a medal!

The up-side of a one day show is that customers have only one day to buy your work... it's now or never. This almost always results in proportionately better sales for the day. Of course the only downside of a one day show is that it's well... a one day show. If the weather is cold or rainy (as it was for the 2008 festival) you're just out of luck and this is the only shot you'll have. But then again when the stars all align and the weather is just plain "picture perfect" like it was for this years show, you just wish the sales could go on and on! Luckily January's weather is very cooperative and the 2008 festival is the only one I can remember where the weather was so disagreeable.

When exhibitors ask me for a January event... I always recommend the Kumquat Festival without hesitation. Remember though... this isn't Delray Beach or Boca Raton. You aren't probably going to sell expensive paintings or jewelry. What you are going to see are nice, handmade, affordable crafts and fine crafts. For the money spent on entry fees... this is definitely one of the better values available.

Here's a show we've attended several times both as an exhibitor some time back and as a writer for "Where The Shows Are!!!" more recently. Every time I attend I'm always impressed with the number of people who come out to shop in this show. The sponsors claim to have 25,000 people over the three day period and indeed they do get that!

The good news here is that you'll see lots and lots of people during the three days of the Olustee Battle Festival. Additionally you'll see a lot of local entertainment that at least during the time we were at the show, wasn't too bad at all. This is one of the best publicized events in Northern Florida. In fact, there is so much local cooperation that the schools have Friday off so the kids can attend the show! There is bad news though too... the economy has seemed to hit this area quite hard and although there were plenty of exhibitors with nice crafts, it seemed as though only the lower priced items were selling. Even though just about everyone was making sales... I don't think there were any record selling weekends in process.

There were definitely some buy/sell booths here at the event... you've got to expect that any time you throw a festival. But I didn't see too much that was really off the deep end to make it more like a flea market. Most of the crafts were quality, handmade items you'd expect to see at just about any normal craft show. Because this is a very "traditional" type of craft crowd, I'd say country crafts represented the majority of the exhibitors. One booth I found particularly interesting was the laser carving booth. Here a husband and wife had set up a machine that uses a computer scanner to copy whatever image you want... and then the laser carving device recreates it in wood as you wait. They were really busy and rightly so since the output was very nice!

In keeping with the Civil War theme, you'll see both Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis strolling around together... as well as several other women and men dressed in costume. The actual re-enactment of the battle takes place in a separate location and has plenty of demonstrations and the like. That's actually good for the exhibitors because at the other re-enactments I've attended where there is a mix crafts and actors, too much focus is away from the sales of crafts and that can be potentially disastrous. At this event we can take advantage of the theme but avoid the potential conflicts as well.

One other major complaint I heard was from the food court. Like the crafts section, this event is best suited to a smaller type of food operation. Trying to bring a larger scale food service will no doubt also bring some level of disappointment. In addition, since all the food is concentrated in two distinct areas, the potential for menu conflicts can arise as well. This may be an area where the show sponsors may want to give some thought fine art from around the state with a great sampling of the best crafts too. Because the competition for booth space is so intense every year, you just don't find any junk in about a more organized way to handle this aspect of the show.

Overall this was another successful year for the Olustee Battle Festival. They had a great crowd and a very nice selection of crafts. For those exhibitors with the right type of product, it was also a very worthwhile event. Trying to find a place to stay right around Lake City can be a bit of a problem because accommodations can be a bit limited. But if you can commute to the show without too much trouble and you make traditional crafts, then this is definitely an event you'll want to consider putting on your schedule.

attended the Art Fiesta... even before I was involved in this business I went to the show. And this year, just like every year for the last 47 the New Smyrna Beach Parks & Recreation Division puts on one of Florida's longest running, most successful art & craft shows. Usually when you hear about an "art & crafts" show you get the impression that it's primarily a craft show with a few pieces of art thrown in to validate the name. This is not the case here. The Art Fiesta is one of those very few events that has figured out how to somehow balance some of the best this show, nothing marginal and you have to look extremely hard to find any buy/sell things anywhere. If you find it, chances are very good you won't see it there again next year. The shoppers know it... they come armed with money... the exhibitors who have done the show know it too. Although there were reports from some people I talked to that sales were down a bit from the preceding year, there were still plenty of shoppers and lots of sales going on so consequently there weren't too many frowns among exhibitors.

This is another show that I've participated in as an exhibitor and have visited several times as a publisher of this guide. It offers a relatively easy setup, good security at night, a friendly and knowledgeable staff (who incidentally produce two other decent shows every year), a dedicated group of shoppers who turn out religiously every year and if we're lucky... usually good weather to go along with all those other great attributes!

Art Fiesta offers a great value for the money and a great show for just about anyone who participates. Of course that's why the entry is so competitive. If you're interested in this one you owe it to yourself to contact Kim at the Parks & Recreation office and get yourself on the list for an application. When the date for application submission comes around, act quickly so you get in. People have been known to FedEx the application to be one of the first in line! Now that doesn't happen when the show isn't good. The number of people who return every year is extremely high... that's the good news. The competition is stiff... that's the bad news! Good luck applying... this one is worth the effort.

The Ponce Inlet Fine Arts Show has been around for quite some time. It's always been an OK show featuring several artists who belong to the local art club. This year however the promotion of the event was taken over by Melissa Jordan and the Daytona Beach News Journal and of course with the extra advertising and promotion that affiliation offers the show was featured like never before in the surrounding communities.

In spite of all that promotion you never know how things will turn out... so you can imagine what a welcome surprise it was to attend the show where the work on exhibit has never been better and the customers who came to look... also bought! I'm sure there were a few people who may have complained about sales, but I guarantee you they were in the minority. Almost every artist we talked to at the event had good things to say about it and as a matter of fact at other shows we ran in to several other people who had been too busy to talk the day of the show and they had nice things to say about the show weeks later.

Sometimes the stars just align right... and this was one of those times. The right weather, the right exhibitors and customers who wanted to take art home. If you're considering participation, then you'll want to make sure the work you're presenting is indeed fine art. There are no country crafts or anything that even resembles it. Melissa takes the jurying process seriously and does a great job of strictly limiting categories while selecting enough variety of work to make the choices interesting for the customers. If the overall opinions we heard from participants and customers is any measure... they left no doubt this was a job well done.

for location rental, she has had to absorb quite a bit to continue these shows. But as the Siesta Tides show proved... when thing "click" as they did for this early February show... then it's certainly worth all the frustration!

This event is literally on the beach. In fact, the bath houses are the restrooms for the show! When I started out to go to the show the weather was threatening so I had my doubts, but I continues to press on because often times the weather is actually much better once you arrive. When I got to Siesta Beach unfortunately the fog was rolling in and the temperature had dropped... so you can imagine my surprise when I saw that the parking lot and the show were both packed with customers! Of course this IS the kind of surprise you like to see at a show. Maybe it was precisely because you couldn't really use the beach... who knows... but then again when you're selling... who cares! And just about everyone exhibiting told me how good the sales were.

Obviously I'm going to tell you to consider participating in the Siesta Tides show... of course all of Carmen's shows are worth considering. Even though it hurts financially not to sell a booth space, she continues to be very ethical in her selection of exhibitors. I all the shows I've attended, there is always the perfect mix of art and quality crafts. Not too much jewelry... not too many photographers... some oil and acrylic painters who told me they had done "very well" over the two days of the show... a nice selection of crafts that fit perfectly into the needs of this seaside/ condo type of community. The selection couldn't have been better for the location... and it shows!

It's been a while since I visited the Gainesville Spring Arts Festival, and because the show has a good reputation as one of the larger, more active events during the spring season... I thought it would be a good idea to stop by and see what was happening. It only took driving to the middle of Gainesville to see all the canopies. There was great signage and you'd have had to be deaf, dumb and blind not to locate the event with a minimal of effort. That's a better sign of a good show than you may think. You can't believe how many events take place that people only a few blocks away don't even know are happening! Parking was certainly adequate although a bit confusing since just about everywhere had to not park signs... but it was Sunday and since everyone else was parking... I did too. I'm always glad to see free parking because more than one event has been ruined by the "parking bandit" who usually like to siphon off $5.00 or so per car.

That almost always puts people in a bad mood before they even start to shop.

I didn't count canopies, but the show claims 215 spaces and it certainly appeared as though there were at least close to that many spaces filled. The show did seem a bit smaller than the last time I visited and it's possible that may have been intentional. Since the market has thinned out somewhat over the last year, some events have limited the number of spaces in a show to make certain there are enough sales to go around. The show also claims 120000 shoppers... now I find that pretty hard to believe. The walkways along side the booths are quite narrow and although there certainly was a nice crowd it's hard to fathom how 120000 people could fit onto one street in a three block area. I looked up the population figures for Gainesville. The 2007 US Census claims the population of 114375. I don't think every man, woman and child in the entire city plus a few thousand more visited the show! These numbers are usually just estimates at best though.

One of the big changes I saw in the show this year were the number of exhibitors from outside of the south. I recognized quite a few faces from other events, but there were a lot of people I didn't recognize from places you don't normally see at a show that normally caters to a more regional participation. I'll have to say though... that regardless of where the exhibitors came from, the work was certainly well done and Kathryn Lehman and her staff did a great job of both selection and placement. There's no doubt that as a shopper you'd never get bored. Unfortunately most of the exhibitors told me that sales were definitely way below normal and that only the small things we selling. I'm sure there were some exceptions to that statement... but I didn't see much leaving the show during the four hours I spent there. Lots of tire kickers and not a lot of buyers.

I'm sure this show like so many others this year, is falling victim to the volatile economy. Gainesville is after all a college town. The students rarely have any money... and with all the funding cuts to Florida's State

It's hard to believe that after all these years of listing the Florida Azalea Festival I had yet to actually visit the show! Although there are a few other shows that have run continuously for a longer period of time... there aren't many.

When you look on a map and you see where Palatka is located, it makes you wonder how good could the show be? After all... this little town lies right smack dab in the middle of no where. But on the day of the Azalea Festival... of the upcoming Blue Crab Festival for that matter... the "middle of no where" suddenly becomes the center of everywhere. If you look into the history of north central Florida you'll see that traditionally Palatka has always been the center of something since the early 1800's.

Well getting back to 2009... this year's festival was very well attended. As you may know, I'm always skeptical of the attendance figures show sponsors provide... but at 40,000 I think they've pretty much hit the nail on the head! For a town that normally has a population of something close to 11,000 that's quite a feat. But it's a nice easy drive from places like Jacksonville, Gainesville, St. Augustine, Orlando and Daytona Beach. I was taking a look at license plates in the parking lots and that pretty much verified my original impression that people seem to drive from all over the area to attend the show.

This is definitely a craft show. I saw some fine art, but to tell you the truth it was just out of place at this event. Even if there were a fantastic fine art exhibit I wouldn't believe much would sell anyway... and with a relatively low income level in the area the people don't have the resources to buy it either. What did sell were lower priced crafts and a fair amount of jewelry. The show included over 330 exhibitors so you can imagine there was just about a little of everything available to buy. No one was making a fortune... but almost everyone who had reasonably priced items were selling something. My guess is that if the economy improves a bit that this will be an event where you could make some decent sales. Keep your expensive items at home though.

For the $75.00 entry fee this show is a good value that's bound to get even better in a good economy. With 64 years of history, my guess is that it will be around next year too!

FestOS™

Festival Management Software

by Tim Poulsen

Owner of Skypanther® Studios, Inc.,
www.skypanther.com

Managing festival applications is hard and often tedious work. Mailing and collecting paper applications, tabulating checks, cross-checking who has paid and who hasn't, calling or emailing approvals and rejections, running to the bank to make deposits, dealing with bad checks, following up on incomplete applications... the list of duties goes on and on. The FestOS festival management system automates much of that work, giving you a lot more time to handle the fun parts of your festival.

FestOS is web-based software for managing festivals. It runs on a web server—you'll need PHP and MySQL support, which is provided with almost every hosting plan out there. FestOS enables online applications, digital photo uploads, online payments, and online management of your applicants. And while it offers quite a few features, most users report that the program is pretty simple to use.

Online saves time

With FestOS, artists (exhibitors, food vendors, and more) apply online. They register on your site with an email address and password. Then, they fill out the application form, upload digital photos (no more slides!), and click Submit. If you've enabled online payments, they can pay your application and booth fees with PayPal or a credit card.

Because the applicants do the data entry, you don't have to. Their information is captured, saved, and ready for reporting, jurying, and publishing on your web site. Typically after submission, you would jury the applicants, assign booths to the approved artists, and send some sort of notification. FestOS provides tools for these tasks too.

Jurying

To jury applicants, you view a web-based slideshow. You don't need special projectors or equipment; just a computer, web browser, and an Internet connection. Jurors don't have to watch the show at the same time. They don't even have to be in the same room to jury the applications—they could be spread out across the country and still participate in jurying.

FestOS takes a simple approach to jurying. You can do blind or "named" jurying. Jurors print a list of applicants, view the slideshow, and mark yes, no, wait-list for each applicant. When done, you use a simple web form to mark the approved applicants, leaving the rest in your system for later consideration or future years.

FestOS might someday offer a fully online system with fancy voting and ranking options. But frankly, the simple approach is what our customers have requested. It's a middle-ground between new electronic tools and the comfortable old-fashioned slide projector method. Like to see something else? Just ask. We're very open to customer input.

After approving the applicants, you assign booth numbers to each. Then, click a button and send out those booth assignments by email. In fact, FestOS offers a few mass email options to eliminate mailing and printing costs.

Web listings

Once approved, artists are automatically listed on your web site. The details they provided, along with the photos they uploaded, are instantly shown on the web to your festival attendees. You don't have to retype information, create special pages, or upload anything. If you make a change, say to unapprove an applicant, their information is instantly hidden. Naturally, you can edit any applicant data and even upload new photos so there's no worry over incomplete or incorrect information showing on your site.

What goes in must come out

FestOS provides various reports that help you keep tabs on applications and your festival. You can get lists of new applicants, applicants who have paid, applicants who started but didn't finish, and so forth. You can print a "booth book" which is a one applicant per page report. Some shows use these books as they wander the festival spot-checking the artists to make sure they're showing what their application said they'd be showing.

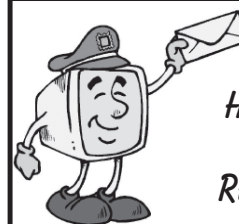

By far, the most popular report is the export report. With it, you can export any or all of the data to an Excel spreadsheet. This makes it simple to sort and search the data or import it into Act! or other contact manager.

Summary

FestOS offers many additional features. These include tools for managing artist categories, listing festival sponsors, and listing festival staff. There's even a simple tool for listing entertainers and performers.

FestOS is licensed like most other software: pay once and it's yours to use. Upgrades might cost a bit, but you don't have to pay monthly service charges. You pay the same regardless of the size of your festival. There is no fee per applicant. You don't even have to host your web site with Skypanther (though you can). We're here to help with site design, installation, and other services or you can do it all on your own.

Visit www.skypanther.com/festos to learn more, watch the video, and compare FestOS to other festival management solutions. Learn more about FestOS in our wiki. Have questions? Post a question on our forums or drop us an email with our contact page.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING

A display ad in "Where The Shows Are!!!" is an extremely cost effective way to reach exhibitors with your message and it gives you a chance to tell a lot more about your event than a simple show listing. ...AND prices start at just $245.00.

EMAIL

We can email your show information to thousands of potential exhibitors at a cost so affordable you'll be wondering why you don't do it several times a year!

DIRECT MAIL

With our ability select exactly the exhibitors you need from our list of over 37,000... We'll put your application directly into the hands of the best potential participants!

POSTCARDS

One of the most proven, time tested methods of stimulating the interest of potential participants in your show... is now also one of the most affordable! You can do the mailing yourself... OR we can do the mailing for you using our list, your list or a combination of the two.

Prices start at just $299.00 for 6"X4" postcards... two sided printing, four colors on both sides AND UV coating.

Call us today at (386) 428-0173
 and we can start helping you right away!
